The 1st (United Kingdom) Division, formerly known as the 1st Armoured Division, is a division of the British Army, currently the only British division to be stationed in Germany. Originally formed in November 1937 as the Mobile Division, it saw extensive service during World War II and was disbanded afterwards; reconstituted in 1976, it remains in service.

The battalion was not on board the 'Royal Edward' when it was sunk in the Aegean. The battalion has been in action in the Dardanelles, where we know from Sir Ian Hamilton's report that there has been severe fighting (Privates Gyatt and Cranfield were killed in this battle on 17th and 19th August respectively).
